63-year-old wrong to be righted

DESMOND The Nova Scotia government will apologize and grant a pardon to the late Viola Desmond, a black woman who was jailed and fined 63 years ago for sitting in the whites-only section of a segregated movie theatre in New Glasgow.

Premier Darrell Dexter will be joined by the lieutenant-governor and his justice minister to grant the formal apology and pardon during a ceremony tomorrow.

Dexter said yesterday the pardon is based on Desmond's innocence and recognizes that a conviction was made in error.

"It's an exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy and it looks to set aside an error that has taken place and to right a wrong," he said outside the legislature.

Dexter said it's proper to recognize Desmond was a person who suffered during a time of racial intolerance. Dexter also said the province is considering the designation of a special day to commemorate Desmond, who died in 1965.

Council slapped on wrist

Bureaucrat warns against more public criticism of municipal staff

ALEX BOUTILIER
for Metro Halifax

HRM's top bureaucrat told regional council in no uncertain terms yesterday to stop publicly criticizing municipal staff.

In a tense pre-budget meeting yesterday morning, chief administrative officer Dan English told councillors some of their comments to the media has hurt employee morale and may foster dissent in the ranks.

"Some of what has happened in recent weeks has been unfair, unnecessary and inappropriate," English said inside council chambers. "I deserve better. My team deserves better. This organization deserves better. And I expect better."

English said he wants council to treat staff with more respect while they discuss budget issues.

"Just in terms of respect at the council table relative to talking about program and service levels, as opposed to just talking about arbitrary amounts of staff layoffs," he told Metro afterwards.

The municipality is currently facing a $32-million deficit for the 2010-11 fiscal year. One of the avenues HRM is considering to close the gap is service reductions, which may have implications for staffing.

English noted there is a process to address any concerns about HRM employees or employment practices — through his office.

"To publicly criticize employees outside of this process has significant consequences," he said. "I will not quietly stand by as HRM's administration and the role of the CAO is undermined."

Dan English

English introduced. He said later all discussions of personnel issues are required to be conducted behind closed doors.

Kelly admitted the municipality's projected deficit requires all avenues to be explored — including staff cuts.

"(Staff cuts) will be the last area we want to go, but ultimately every stone will be unturned," he said. "In these challenging economic times, work force adjustments are ... often around. However, as indicated, this is a last resort of council."

Decision deferred on parking fee hike

REVENUE Regional council will wait another week to decide whether motorists will pay more to park in downtown Halifax and Dartmouth.

Downtown Halifax Coun. Dawn Sloane told council last night the business community hasn't had enough time to evaluate the effect a proposed increase in parking meter rates will have on their businesses.

Sloane requested the issue be deferred until council meets again April 20.

"I've had several inquiries from (businesses), and they're a little worried that they weren't given enough notice," Sloane told council. "They had two days to actually absorb what this was going to do to their businesses."

Council approved the deferral in a narrow vote.

A staff report recommends raising the parking meter rate by 50 cents per hour as of May 31. If approved, parking for an hour in downtown Halifax would cost $2, and $1.50 in downtown Dartmouth.

Council also voted to close several Visitor Information Centres in the urban core and Sackville yesterday. The closure is expected to save the municipality $266,000 annually.

HRM will also be expanding burial services in municipal cemeteries, which is expected to turn a $400,000 annual cost into a $55,000 to $100,000 source of revenue.

Liberals headed to Baddeck

Cape Breton will be the centre of the Liberal party universe when the federal caucus gathers in Baddeck over three days for its annual summer caucus. Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff, MPs, senators and party officials will be setting the stage for what is expected to be a lively fall session of Parliament and likely laying out aspects of the party's national platform at the summer caucus at Baddeck's Inverary Inn from Aug. 30 to Sept. 1.

Man handed DUI charges after car crashes into fence

COLE HARBOUR A 21-year-old man is facing impaired driving charges after police say the car he was driving crashed into a residence's fence and a neighbour's shed on Cathy Lane in Cole Harbour early yesterday morning.

Police say residents were woken around 3 a.m. because of the loud crash.

According to police, residents witnessed a man leaving a vehicle that had been encased in their fence and their neighbour's shed. Police found and arrested a man a short time later on Flagstone Drive.

The 21-year-old is charged with impaired driving, impaired operation of a vehicle over 80 mg and leaving the scene of a crash. He will appear in provincial court next month.

Sir Paul could've cost us millions

Province was on hook to cover McCartney's $3.5 million concert fee

Nova Scotians learned yesterday they would have been on the hook for $3.5 million in fees to Paul McCartney if his concert on the Halifax Common last summer was a bust.

Premier Darrell Dexter confirmed reports on The Coast website that the province made a guarantee to pay McCartney's multimillion-dollar appearance.

Had the concert not sold enough tickets, Nova Scotia would have had to pay the bill on top of $600,000 it had already spent on the event. That didn't happen and the money was paid to McCartney from ticket profits.

Yesterday Premier Darrell Dexter said the contract was signed by the previous government. He said promoter Harold MacKay's Power Promotional Concepts asked the NDP for even more money in the summer. The government declined.

"We thought $600,000 as an investment was a lot of money for the province in any event, and the fact that the province was potentially on the hook for the $3.5-million guarantee, it seemed that we had far and away done the lion's share for that particular promotion," said Dexter.

The municipality also kicked in $195,000. Of the provincial money, $300,000 was supposed to be repaid if ticket sales were high enough.

That threshold was never reached and sales data has not been made public.

Dexter wouldn't close the door on using public money to back private concerts in the future. He said future proposals would have to undergo a cost-benefit analysis.

"These are private ventures but they also have great spinoff for the broader community," he said.

"You don't necessarily rule them out, but I think you would approach them very, very cautiously."

There is an event fund that developers can apply to.

No applications were made for any of the concerts on the Common this summer.

CHILD PORN A new law that took effect yesterday requires all Nova Scotians to report suspected child pornography. The provincial government says the intent is to help reduce the sexual exploitation of children. Anyone who comes across child porn must now contact the police. Officials say the law, first unveiled about two years ago, will protect people from retaliation they could suffer for reporting the material.

SPORTS Bill Estabrooks says recent complaints that prompted the RCMP to stop kids from playing street hockey are "frivolous."

The province's transportation minister responded yesterday to local media reports of a Mountie who showed up at a woman's home last Thursday in Enfield and said her son and his buddies had to stop playing street hockey.

"The kids that I know in the community, when they see you coming after they invite you to play for a moment or two, they get out of the way," he said.

"It's a tradition in this country and it should be allowed to continue."

The woman, Debbie Jefferies, said the officer indicated police had received complaints about the boys playing.

Estabrooks said police are busy enough as it is and have more important things to do than stopping children from playing hockey on the streets.

"We get a lot of complaints as politicians and I'm sure the police do too," Estabrooks told reporters at the legislature. "Ball hockey is a part of the right of growing up and the right of being on your own street."

While it's a common sight on suburban Canadian streets, the noise and public safety issues related to road hockey has created controversy in municipalities across the country.

Last month, a Montreal-area man vowed to fight a $75 fine after a neighbour complained a group of adults and kids were playing street hockey loudly.

In 2006, a proposed by-law that some feared could threaten street hockey in Halifax prompted Cole Harbour hockey star Sidney Crosby to send an email to Mayor Peter Kelly in support of the game.

Anti-McNeil site springs up as Liberal leader's post nears review

PAUL MCLEOD

POLITICS Stephen McNeil's judgment day is still a month away but a movement to oust him as provincial Liberal leader has already kicked off.

An anonymous site at www.leadershpreview.ca makes a not-so-subtle case for Liberal members to vote against McNeil at his May leadership review.

The website posts various negative news clippings about the leader, shows some statistics on how party support hasn't grown since he took over, and asks questions like "Do you think McNeil can win the next election?"

McNeil took the site in

stride yesterday and said he is looking forward to the review.

"I knew not everyone was going to be supporting me. That's one of the challenges when you're the leader of any organization," he said.

McNeil pointed out the site was anonymous and could have just been one person. "It's no different than people posting comments on articles with not putting their own name to them. I give very little credence to them," he said.

"If they really have a challenge with my leadership, a problem with it, I expect them to come forward."

Party members from across the province can send in ballots saying they do or do not support McNeil. They will be tallied at the Liberal AGM on the weekend of May 14. McNeil has not said what approval rating he considers satisfactory.

250 spaces added to NSCC

$2M investment going to high-demand programs

PHILIP CROUCHER
philip.croucher@metronews.ca

Joan McArthur-Blair refers to it as a beginning step.

The president of the Nova Scotia Community College was on hand at the school's Institute of Technology campus in north-end Halifax yesterday as Premier Darrell Dexter announced his government was adding 250 spaces for students at NSCC campuses across the province at a cost of $2 million.

"We have about 2,500 Nova Scotians currently on our wait list — and so this is incremental," McArthur-Blair said after the noontime announcement. "It's a beginning to look at the ways in which we dissolve that wait list and how we understand about getting more and more Nova Scotians into the college."

No definitive decision has been made on where the new spaces for students will go, but McArthur-Blair said it would be for "high-demand areas" of employment.

She said those fields include the health sector, human-service areas, and trades and technology.

To help bring this point home, yesterday's announcement attended by Electronic engineering student Keegan Gingell uses an oscilloscope as he works on an FM radio at the NSCC Institute of Technology campus yesterday. The province announced $2 million in funding yesterday to increase the capacity of high-demand programs at NSCC.

Dexter and Education Minister Marilyn More took place inside an IT classroom for the electronic engineering technicians program.

"It's really targeted programming at those high-demand areas where this is both the student demand and the employer demand,"

McArthur-Blair said. "So we're being very targeted with these 250 seats."

For the 2009-10 academic year, 10,959 full-time students are enrolled in certificate or diploma programs at one of NSCC's 13 campuses across the province.

Dexter said this anouncement by his NDP government fulfils a campaign commitment and helps grow the Nova Scotia economy and create secure jobs.

"An investment in NSCC is a good investment is Nova Scotia's future," Dexter told those in attendance.

Coyote bounty looks more certain as decision looms

WILDLIFE A bounty on coyote pelts in Nova Scotia is looking more likely, with a final decision coming by Friday.

Natural Resources Minister John MacDonell indicated yesterday he's leaning towards a bounty and said he just wants to speak to an animal-behaviour specialist before making the final call.

"I've heard nothing that makes me think I could be going down the wrong road on this," he told reporters at Province House.

Coyotes can already be shot all year round but there hasn't been a bounty since the mid-1980s. A previous bounty from 1982 to '86 was discontinued because it was seen as ineffective.

MacDonell said the price for a pelt wouldn't be above the $20 mark set by Saskatchewan's recent bounty. But exactly how the system would work isn't yet clear.

"We haven't fleshed that out," MacDonell said.

"I think the place where we're at is we're more interested in having this done through the trapper's association."

Conservatives proposing fixed election dates

PAUL MCLEOD
paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

POLITICS The idea of fixed election dates is once again being floated in Nova Scotia.

The Progressive Conservatives are proposing a law to set election dates on the first Tuesday in October every fourth year.

There were a few raised eyebrows from Liberals, who had proposed a bill last year that would do the exact same thing, only with the date two weeks later.

Opposition parties argue that fixing the date would bring stability to the system, help governments in their long-term planning and give voters the convenience of a reliable election date.

But any electoral reform would have to be accepted by the NDP and Premier Darrell Dexter said yesterday he prefers the traditional parliamentary system.

"My view of this is that fixed election dates have been less successful than people thought that they might be," he said.

"In fact, what they have done is essentially led us down the road to a kind of U.S.-style electioneering where you actually have elections that go on for months and almost years with everyone fixed on a particular date."

Tory interim leader Karen Casey said she didn't buy that argument, saying pre-election campaigns already stretch out for months in Canada.

New ferry possible in '11: Official

YARMOUTH The manager of the Port of Yarmouth says the prospects are good for a ferry service next year to New England.

Dave Whiting says there are five interested parties, including Bay Ferries, looking at an alternative service to the Cat ferry.

The operators of the Cat ferry to Maine announced in December that they were shutting down the service after the provincial government refused to provide any more subsidies.

Whiting says everyone involved is waiting to hear from Transport Canada on the terms on the ferry terminal. Local officials are looking to take ownership of the terminal and Whiting says they first need to know when Transport Canada will begin the process of divestiture.

Whiting says once the details are clear, then comes the issue of funding for a ferry service after proposals are in hand.

INVESTIGATION Police are looking for two young males after two youths were robbed on Monday night in Fairview. Halifax Regional Police say the incident took place at 6:45 p.m. on Gesner Street near Main Avenue. Police say two male youths were walking in the area when two other males approached them and demanded they give up what they had on them. Police say one victim had two cellphones taken, while the other male youth was robbed of his cellphone and wallet. No weapons were at the scene, police say, and neither victim was hurt. Police describe the suspects as being in their late teens.

INFRACTIONS Police slapped 34 people with tickets for using a cellphone while driving last month as part of a specific focus by HRM traffic officers to make sure motorists were obeying the law. As well last month, the Halifax Regional Police/RCMP Integrated Traffic Unit issued 77 tickets for not using daytime running lights. This month, the unit is focusing on vehicle safety compliance, as daytime checkpoints will be conducted.

Peter Pan play set to soar

SHELBY MCDONALD

Peter Pan will fly again.

The beloved fairy tale is coming to life thanks to director George Pothitos and the Neptune Theatre. Peter Pan, the play, takes to the stage from Friday through May 30 and will end a Neptune season Pothitos has referred to as one based on hope.

Pothitos, in his second year as artistic director at Neptune, said he's been planning to put this large production on the Neptune stage for over a year and a half.

"It was extremely hard but very joyous because there are a lot of elements to put together because it's a musical," Pothitos said about getting this sure-fire box-office hit off the ground. "It was daunting but we started early with the visions and designs."

When it comes to the play Peter Pan, Pothitos has a message for people going to the show. He wants the audience to forget about any daily worries and get lost in the fantasy musical journey the production provides.

"We all need to tap into our childhood memories, just to connect us with our past and the joyous memories," he said.

"Not to take us back and forget where we are, but just to remind us of our childhood and how we were and how we are now."

Stephen Roberts grew up watching Disney's Peter Pan but never thought he'd be starring as the titled character of the play at 25.

Fight's on to relocate tire recycling plant

LAW A northern Nova Scotia municipality is launching a legal fight to have a tire recycling plant located in its area.

The Municipality of the District of Guysborough filed a notice of action yesterday asking the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia to overturn a decision awarding a tire recycling contract to a Halifax company.

The case against the province's Resource Recovery Fund Board, a non-profit body, states that it made "serious errors" in awarding the contract to Halifax C&D Recycling Ltd.

The municipality is also seeking damages and costs, and wants to find out why it didn't win.

Guysborough proposed to put the recycling plant at its existing waste management facility near Lincolnville.

The warden says the municipality had the best business plan with the lowest bid and would have provided needed jobs in the area.

A spokesman with the board said he couldn't comment on the matter since it is before the courts. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Global effort urged for nuclear security

The 47 nations at U.S. President Barack Obama's Nuclear Security Summit agreed yesterday that all countries are responsible for safeguarding nuclear weapons and materials and keeping them out of terrorists' hands, citing a new reality in which terror concerns outweigh worries about attacks by nuclear powers.

A communique also directs the global community to work in concert against the sale or theft of nuclear materials, with nations co-operating more deeply with the United Nations and its watchdog arm, the International Atomic Energy Agency. The final document closes the two-day gathering that was called by Obama to focus world attention on the dangers of terrorists obtaining nuclear materials.

Addressing the conference, Obama framed the problem as a "cruel irony of history" — nuclear dangers on the rise, even after the end of the Cold War and decades of fear stoked by a U.S.-Soviet arms race. A terrorist group in possession of plutonium no bigger than an apple could detonate a device capable of inflicting hundreds of thousands of casualties, he said.

"Terrorist networks such as al-Qaida have tried to acquire the material for a nuclear weapon, and if they ever succeeded, they would surely use it," he said.

Twitter to add ads

ONLINE Twitter announced yesterday that it is introducing advertising, allowing companies to pay to have their messages show up first in searches on its site.

Twitter has grown quickly in popularity since it started in 2006, with celebrities such as Oprah Winfrey and Ashton Kutcher "tweeting" messages of 140 characters or less alongside everyday users.

Twitter has been making an undisclosed amount of money by providing Google Inc. and Microsoft Corp. with access to messages for their search engines.

Many people expected Twitter would eventually introduce advertising.

Foreign ownership a threat, says CRTC

Canada's federal regulator has come out strongly against foreign control of the country's telecom sector.

CRTC chairman Konrad von Finckenstein told a House of Commons committee yesterday that foreigners should be restricted to a maximum 49 per cent of controlling shares in any telecommunications firm.

"If you don't do this ... we will have a branch plant communications industry," he said.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission head was testifying on a proposal in last month's throne speech that would see the government "open Canada's doors further to venture capital and to foreign investment" in "satellite and telecommunications industries."

But von Finckenstein said it was not possible to allow foreign ownership rules to relax on the telecoms without opening up Canada's broadcasters — the culturally sensitive content part of the sector — as well.

'Air Canada' hopes to shine

Rainmen forward Crookshank is hungry for a championship

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

From the day Eric Crookshank touched down in Halifax, he's been talking about winning a championship.

After 2 1/2 years and 62 games in a Halifax Rainmen jersey — a stretch in which the high-flying Californian has played a vital role in establishing the franchise as one of the hottest tickets in town — he's finally getting his opportunity.

"I'm hungry," Crookshank said.

"The first year, there was really no structure for the playoffs. Last year, we were knockin' on the door and couldn't get in. This year, we got in at the last minute. I'm blown away."

With the six-foot-seven Crookshank playing the best basketball of his career, the fourth-seeded Rainmen host the first-place Lawton-Fort Sill Cavalry tomorrow at 7 p.m. at the Metro Centre in Game 1 of the Premier Basketball League best-of-three semifinal.

It's the first playoff game in Rainmen history. The Rainmen missed the PBL playoffs last year and quit the American Basketball Association in 2007-08 before the post-season began.

The Cavalry are a formidable foe, but the Rainmen are one of just two teams that have managed to beat the former Continental Basketball Association powerhouse.

Eric Crookshank averaged 14.4 points, 13.0 rebounds and 1.6 blocks for the Rainmen in 19 games this season.

Both the PBL semifinal and final are best-of-three series.

"All we have to do is win four out of six games to win a championship," Crookshank said.

"That's all you've got to do. We can do that."

The 31-year-old has been unofficially anointed the Rainmen's team MVP by owner Andre Levingston after averaging 14.4 points, 13.0 rebounds and 1.6 blocks in 19 games this season. It's no secret Crookshank — self-dubbed Air Canada — relishes the spotlight.

It will be certainly centred on him more than ever before when the opening tip-off goes up tomorrow.

"Every possession counts in the playoffs," Crookshank said.

"This is what I like: the bright lights. When the lights are bright, I perform."

Gallimore could be out for Game 1

INJURY The Halifax Rainmen are expecting to be a man short when the Premier Basketball League playoffs open tomorrow.

Reserve guard Garry Gallimore, one of the team's key defensive stoppers who averaged 6.0 points and 2.0 rebounds per game off the bench, will likely be sidelined with a twisted ankle.

"It's not looking good for him, barring two really good days of treatment," said Rainmen head coach Les Berry.

Berry said backup point guard Eric Gilchrese is likely to dress despite a bothersome hamstring injury. But he'll be used sparingly in relief of red-hot starter Gary Ervin.

Injured all-star guard Tony Bennett (Achilles) and reserve small forward Jevohn Shepherd (ankle) have been limited in practice for the past week but are expected to play tomorrow.

The Rainmen would have 10 players available to dress with Gallimore out of the lineup.

Winning the lottery: Oilers nab first overall pick in draft

NHL The Edmonton Oilers have gone from worst to first.

Two days after finishing the regular season with the league's worst record, the Oilers won yesterday's annual draft lottery to secure the top pick in the June draft. It marks the fourth time in five years that the league's worst team has ended up with the top pick.

The Boston Bruins will draft second. Boston secured Toronto's first-round pick in an off-season trade that sent forward Phil Kessel to the Maple Leafs.

The rest of the draft order also remained the same. The Florida Panthers will select third, followed by the

Duchesne could be backup for Flyers

NHL The Philadelphia Flyers could turn to Halifax Mooseheads alumnus Jeremy Duchesne as their backup during the first round of the NHL playoffs.

The Flyers made Duchesne one of seven minor-league call-ups yesterday and there is a good chance the 23-year-old goaltender will serve as backup to Brian Boucher when the Flyers visit the New Jersey Devils for Game 1 of the best-of-seven series tonight.

Johan Backlund, who is ahead of Duchesne on the Flyers' goaltending depth chart, has a sore groin. Veteran Sebastien Caron, who signed near the end of the regular season, is not eligible for playoff action.

Duchesne made his NHL debut two weeks ago, appearing in 16 minutes of third-period mop-up duty for Boucher.

He spent most of the season in the ECHL with the Kalamazoo Wings, posting a 3.20 goals-against average and a .904 save percentage in 24 starts. METRO HALIFAX

Canada upset by Swiss at U-18 tournament

HOCKEY Guy Carbonneau is hoping to turn a disappointing loss to Switzerland into a motivational tool for his Canadian team at the IIHF world under-18 championship in Belarus.

The Canadians were upset 3-1 by the Swiss yesterday in their first preliminary round game of the annual hockey tournament.

"It's a bump in the road and hopefully we can find a way to get back," said Carbonneau, the Canadian head coach.

"Sometimes that's what you need — a good ass-kicking to get you going."

Halifax Mooseheads forward Gabriel Desjardins, a rotating alternate captain for Canada, was held off the scoresheet and had one shot in the loss.

"Today we tried to play on our skills instead of just a lot of hard work and we got caught," Carbonneau said.

In the other early game yesterday, Finland hammered Latvia 7-2. At night, Sweden knocked off the U.S. 4-2 and Russia beat the Czech Republic 4-1.

Gregor Hoffman and Samuel Guerra scored in the first period to give the

Guy Carbonneau

Swiss a 2-0 lead.

"We knew they were going to work for 60 minutes," said Carbonneau.

"That's the kind of team that they have."

Quinton Howden of Oakbank, Man., cut the lead to 2-1 midway through the second but Joel Vermin secured the victory with an empty-net goal with five seconds to go in the third.

"It took us a period to really find our legs," Carbonneau said. "We played a little bit better at the end but I don't think it was the effort that we wanted to have in the first game."

Winnipeg's Calvin Pickard made 31 saves for Canada. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Western series

• San Jose (1st) versus Colorado (8th)

Beating the Sharks will be a tall task for Colorado, which seemed to fade late in the season, and San Jose usually gets through one round before disaster hits.

• Chicago (2nd) versus Nashville (7th)

This could be the gifted young Blackhawks' year, but it starts against a tough opponent with a hot goalie in Pekka Rinne. Chicago looks to have everything except proven goaltending, which makes it an intriguing matchup, although Antti Niemi got the job done adequately down the stretch.

• Vancouver (3rd) versus Los Angeles (6th)
Henrik Sedin was the story for the Canucks this year, taking the Art Ross Trophy with a team record 112 points even though his linemate and twin brother Daniel missed part of the season with an injury. Now he'll have to lead the attack again against an L.A. club that is in the playoffs for the first time since 2002.

• Phoenix (4th) versus Detroit (5th)

The Coyotes are up against a formidable opponent in Detroit, which coasted through most of the season and caught fire at the end. Star defenceman Niklas Lidstrom has looked his old self of late, as have veteran scorers Henrik Zetterberg and Pavel Datsyuk. And Jimmy Howard has provided solid goaltending for a team that has probably far too much depth and playoff experience for the surprising Coyotes.

Sharks seek redemption

San Jose looks to shed label of playoff underachievers

From the moment they arrived in training camp to the final day of the regular season when they wrapped up the top seed in the Western Conference, one question has been hanging over the San Jose Sharks.

Will this be the year the Sharks can finally shed their label of playoff underachievers and taste some post-season success?

It's a question the Sharks have long grown tired of but one they know will keep coming until all the talent they have translates into a long post-season run.

"It's a new year. That's all I have to say," defenceman Dan Boyle said. "It's a new year, new players, new team. It's a new year, man. That's it. You have to turn the page at some point. We have to win some games so these questions can stop."

The Sharks get their chance to do that starting tonight, when they host the eighth-seeded Colorado

San Jose has averaged about 109 points per season the past five years — second best in the NHL — but hasn't made it past the second round in that span.

Avalanche in the opener of their first-round series.

Hanging over them all series will be last year's first-round flop against Anaheim, when the Sharks lost in six games despite having the best record in the NHL in the regular season.

"We're a different team," coach Todd McLellan said. "We keep talking about last year. We keep going back to last year. I've been asked that question a hundred times. This is a different team. Half the faces in there weren't involved in the playoffs last year with our club. The organization failed last year, the group of players who were here last year didn't succeed. This is a different group. We're moving forward. We're not talking about last year."

McLellan's message was echoed throughout the locker-room by his players, who stressed that all the changes the team made in the off-season should provide a clean slate heading into this post-season.

The splashiest move was the trade for high-scoring forward Dany Heatley, who delivered with 39 goals and helped form one of the league's most dangerous lines with Joe Thornton and Patrick Marleau.

But the additions of Scott Nichol, Manny Malhotra and Jed Ortmeyer helped improve the team's grittiness and faceoff success. There was also a change of leadership with defenceman Rob Blake taking over the captain duties from Marleau.

Marleau responded to the demotion with a career-high 44 goals, while Blake will bring a new leadership voice in the locker-room during this post-season run.

"The franchise itself hasn't done what it needed to do in the playoffs the past couple years," said Blake, who won the Stanley Cup with Colorado in 2001.

"This team, we don't know. We wanted to get in this position, we wanted to be in the playoffs and set that record straight. This is a new team, a new adventure for us coming into the playoffs this year."

Eastern series

• Washington (1st) versus Montreal (8th)

The Capitals bring the most intimidating attack in hockey, but there are question marks. Do they have the goaltending to go far in Jose Theodore or Semyon Varlamov (or Theodore Michal Neuvirth)? And can they play the defensively tight team game that usually produces Cup winners?

• New Jersey (2nd) versus Philadelphia (7th)
Goaltending will be front and centre in this series because New Jersey has it in spades and Philadelphia does not. Martin Brodeur became the all-time leader in goaltending wins and shutouts this season and remains a force at 37, although it is hard to forget his Game 7 meltdown in the opening round last year against Carolina.

• Buffalo (3rd) versus Boston (6th)
The terrific play of young goalie Tuukka Rask lets Boston come at least close to matching Buffalo's biggest strength, star goalie Ryan Miller.

The Sabres look to have rediscovered the fast-paced two-way game that made them a league power early in the decade.

• Pittsburgh (4th) versus Ottawa (5th)
The teams split their season series 2-2, each winning home and away once each. All the games were decided by three or more goals. Evgeni Malkin had five goals in four games against the Sens, while Sidney Crosby was held to three assists. This series could be decided in goal, where Marc-Andre Fleury gives Pittsburgh the edge over Brian Elliott.

Elliott's lack of playoff experience doesn't worry Sens

GOALIE Matt Cullen was with Carolina when a then-inexperienced Cam Ward led the Hurricanes to the Stanley Cup, and sees no reason for the Senators to be concerned with going green in goal this spring.

Ottawa is relying on net-minder Brian Elliott to backstop its chances for success when the Senators face the defending Stanley Cup champion Pittsburgh Penguins in the opening round of the playoffs.

Game 1 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference quarter-final goes tonight at Mellon Arena (CBC, 8 p.m. AT).

Elliott may not have a minute of professional playoff experience to his credit, but the 25-year-old is undisputed only to those outside of the Senators' dressing room.

"In that position especially, I think it's a little bit of an overrated thing," Cullen said yesterday before the Senators left for Pittsburgh.

Cullen, who won a Stanley Cup with the Hurricanes in 2006, was dealt to Ottawa two months ago.

"Goalies are goalies. Goalies are a different breed, right? If a goalie's playing well, he's playing well," he added. "Knowing Ellis, he's a hard-working guy, really dedicated, I'm not worried about him."

Berlin Wall quickly becoming cyclist destination

EUGENE HENDERSON
Metro World News

In the 20th century there were few more offensive symbols of man's seemingly unquenchable need to spread hatred, division, and suspicion than the Berlin Wall.

Stark, grey, brutal — the wall was a concrete embodiment of the most stupid wall and takes the cyclist on a journey through thriving city, uplifting countryside and through history itself.

Serious cyclists complete the Mauerweg in a day — but that is to miss its point.

Starting at Potsdamer Platz, with its cutting edge skyscraping architecture the blue-print of a modern Euro-city, you follow the grey Mauerweg signs away from the hubbub. The trail is divided into 14 sections between seven and 21km long, and each on has its own feel and story.

Yes, you will pass the former Gestapo Headquarters, or Bernauer Strasse, where an impotent wedge of wall still stands, the spot where protester Michael Gartenschlaeger was carved up by 120 Stasi bullets, the Glienicke Brücke, where Cold War spies were exchanged, and Lake Wannsee where Third Reich henchmen would party while planning the Final Solution.

The sense of history will stop you in your tracks.

But so will the sense of the future, because here, in the ruins of the Wall 21st century Berliners are now enjoying the simple pleasure of the city's greenbelt. They walk dogs, they picnic, they roller-skate and the sheer normality of it all somehow adds to its beauty.

And onwards through Schönebeide to Schönefeld to Lichterfelde to Griebnitzsee and on to Staaken, Hennigsdorf, Nordbahnhof, each day will reward you with more than just a great cycle ride though some lovely countryside — you'll get a sense of being part of much bigger and more significant. And not many bike rides can offer that.

Riding along the Berlin Wall you get a deeper sense of history.

A traditional doner sandwich.

FOOD Forget about bratwurst, currywurst and other kinds of sausages — doner kebab, or shawarma, has overtaken traditional German fast food as the country's favourite snack on the go.

First brought to Berlin by Turkish immigrants in the 1970s, the grilled meat snack that comes wrapped in a pita bread with shredded lettuce, tomatoes, onions and different dressings, is now being sold everywhere in Germany from the Baltic Sea to the Bavarian Alps.

Students and late night revellers relish it as much as construction workers, children and foreign backpackers on a tight budget. "We assume that doner kebab is the Germans' favourite fast food by now," said Yunus Ulusoy, an expert from the Center for the Study of Turkey in Essen, who has done extensive research on how the ethnic specialty conquered Germany's culinary mainstream.

The secret behind the doner's success story is not only its satisfying grilled taste, Ulusoy said, but also the big portions and its affordability — a regular doner in a pita costs only between $3.30 to $6.70.

Some 15,500 doner places in Germany sell about 400 tonnes of doner meat every day, according to ATDID, the Association of Turkish Doner Producers in Europe. About 60,000 workers produce, cut and process the hearty delicacy with annual sales of 2.5 billion euros.

No yellow brick road needed

Chinese tourist destination offers a refuge for little people

RICHARD MORIARTY
Metro World News

The long and the short of it is simple — this is the world's only Dwarf Empire and if you're over 1.5 meters you're not coming in.

But this land of little people in Kunming, in the Chinese province of Yunnan, where little people live in a sanctuary entirely separate from the average sized world has become an unlikely tourist attraction.

Everyone at the settlement have their accommodation, healthcare and food taken care of in return for performing musicals and shows for normal-sized visitors.

Their community set on the Kishan mountain, in which they will allow you into their mushroom-roofed houses to make you cups of coffee and smoke shisha, is a trek up a windy, vertiginous road, but at the top the little people provide a giant welcome.

You can take in one of Kunming is home to the only little person community on Earth.

the spellbinding musicals in their ramshackle amphitheatre, where performances include ballet, ShaoLin martial arts, breakdancing, traditional folk Chinese songs and a version of U.S. pop act the Pussycat Dolls.

The performances aren't always note perfect, but the tiny showmen are hard to take your eyes off.

On arrival you will be greeted by around 100 people in fancy dress — belly dancers, Roman centurions, folk dancers, and dwarf men in top hats rush out to meet you through the mountain fog.

The community was set up by average sized businessman Cheng Mingjing, a former electronics salesman who spent millions on building a butterfly park as well as the settlement.

The settlement is a haven for dwarves who have been abused in the wider world.

It even has its own parliament who settle domestic disputes and promote the regular activities outside the park, and their own national anthem which is sung before each performance.

No little person — regardless of musical talent — is turned away from the park, if they do not perform they are given maintenance catering, public relations or security roles.

How (and how not) to speak

Finer points of public speaking are important in all walks of life, says expert

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

In socio-political terms, the first quarter of 2010 has proven crucial in learning what not to do.

Amusingly, most of those lessons have come from figures we've been urged to shape our lives after. Many felt unconvinced during golf pro Tiger Woods' public apology for scandalous behaviour. He appeared awkwardly indifferent while reading what was meant to be sincere atonement.

Similarly, Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin disgraced himself during the recent Olympics ordeal when American figure skater Evan Lysacek was forced to defend his gold medal win against an insulting, emotionally charged and impulsive attack.

Odd that individuals graced with the finer aspects of keeping up appearances should tarnish themselves so heavily. Yet as Peter Handal, CEO of performance-based workforce development organization Dale Carnegie Training reveals, even the most cultivated of us can slip, especially when speaking in public.

"It's very common for individuals not used to speaking in front of an au-

When it comes to public speaking, the best thing to do is own the topic, know your subject, and talk to — not at — your audience.

"If the audience feels they are trying to be convinced of something, they will be less receptive to what you have to say." Peter Handal dience to read and rely upon notes to quell nerves and eliminate awkward silences but it is essential for this to be kept at a minimum if the speaker wants to be perceived as sincere," he notes. "(Woods') speech itself was well-written and included all the hallmarks of a heartfelt, appropriate apology but its delivery before a contrived audience

In that respect, Handal looks to Lysacek as the epitome of proper public speaking. He got his point across by not relying too heavily upon printed materials, being himself, including the audience in the conversation while keeping it brief, utilizing strong eye contact and injecting his speech with enthusiasm. He also stresses that the overall modus should be to own the topic; know the subject of the presentation well enough to feel comfortable discussing it.

Thankfully, such funda-mentals apply to all aspects of public speaking be it in the classroom, lunchroom or boardroom and with any audience from one to one thousand. Furthermore, despite age, gender or background, intent remains constant: To speak with people as opposed to at them via sincerity, pacing, enthusiasm and securing their desire to feel important.

"If the audience feels they are trying to be convinced of something, they will immediately go on the defensive and be less receptive to what you have to say," Handal closes. "Talk in terms of (their) interests and use their names often. One Dale Carnegie Training principle states, 'to them, a person's name is the sweetest and most important sound in any language.' Using it often will keep them engaged."

It is also possible that the factory does not have the capacity to produce all the goods ordered by the customer. In this case, the factory may be required to limit the quantity of goods produced. This is a common problem in the food industry, where the demand for certain products can be very high. The factory may need to find ways to increase its production capacity, such as by investing in new equipment or hiring more workers. Alternatively, the factory may need to find ways to reduce its production costs, such as by finding cheaper sources of raw materials or improving its production process. In any case, the factory needs to be able to meet the demand of its customers, or it will risk losing its market share.

Respect for mechanics

AutoPilot

Michael Goetz

metronews.ca/autopilot

When you take your car to a mechanic does it usually end in tears?

What is it about the nature of getting cars fixed that seems to generate acrimony?

There is one obvious reason: How would you rather spend $2,300? On a leaking and overheated transmission, or on a family trip to Disney? Okay, some of you might opt for the transmission, but you get my point.

Other reasons for dysfunctional customer-mechanic relationships usually centre on mistrust and competency.

You, or your uncle, once got charged $437 for a replacement foobleboomer, and it never fixed anything, because that car never even had a foobleboomer.

But today we're going to examine a less-discussed irritant in the relationship — the customer.

I once worked for a spell behind the service counter at a busy GM dealership. My colleagues and I dealt with a lot of upset customers, because, well, this was the early 1980s, when GM was transitioning from big cars to smaller, front-drive cars, and this didn't always go well.

Some customers commiserated with our mutual plight, and were patient and polite.

Others were scary. The language! Our young cashier found it particularly hard to take; at least once a week she would have to retire to the bathroom for a good cry.

Here is a partial list of other questionable customer behaviour we experienced:

- Demanding warranty coverage, even though the vehicle was years out of warranty and used regularly to tow circus animals;
- Accusing us of a "make work" project if we even suggested something like replacing a 21-year-old drive belt;

• Letting their unsupervised children make forts out of empty oil barrels. Leaving us to empty the trunk of dead cats (or what looked like dead cats) before we could get in there to change a turn signal bulb.

I've sat in on lots of training seminars for mechanics and service advisors, and many had lots to say about difficult customers ... How to manage their sky-high expectations ... How to prevent them from damaging the morale of hard working, talented, and honest workers ... How to get them interacting more effectively with service staff.

On the latter point, one trainer advised to tell customers to show up for service appointments with a vehicle that was "ready for service," which basically meant: clean inside and out; nothing in the trunk and cargo area; gas in the tank.

Michael Goetz has been writing about cars and editing automotive publications for over 20 years. He lives in Toronto with his family and a neglected 1967 Jaguar E-type.

Morgan keeps it lively

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

When Tracy Morgan signed up for Twitter last October, the online world went wild. But after about a month of regular updates in his signature scatterbrained style, the 30 Rock star went quiet. There's a reason for that, he tells Metro.

"I've always been a private person. I'm from the hood. You got to understand, I'm from a different generation. I don't even know how to use a computer, man," he says. "But if I started using Twitter, it'd be x-rated. I'm going up for the upstroke now, coming down on the downstroke."

Aside from worries about adult-oriented content, Morgan also stays off the micro-blogging site because he doesn't want to waste good material.

"If they're getting everything right there on Twitter, they're not going to Tracy Morgan and Chris Rock star in Death at a Funeral which opens this Friday.

Death at a Funeral opens Friday

come see me do stand-up," he says. "I like to store information and put it on stage."

Morgan says he still does stand-up every weekend, even with the production schedule for his award-winning sitcom 30 Rock and promotional duties for film's like Cop Out and this week's Death at a Funeral. He's gearing up for a two-to-three month stand-up tour before 30 Rock begins filming its fifth season, and he insists his increased success hasn't slowed him down any. "I'm still out there getting girls pregnant," he says.

But first he has to promote Death at a Funeral, his new ensemble comedy that puts him alongside Chris Rock and Martin Lawrence, something Morgan doesn't take for granted.

"Chris Rock and Martin Lawrence are my heroes. Those guys put me to work when I first started as a kid," he says. "They allowed me to stand on their shoulders."

And he's doing his best to keep things lively during the exhausting publicity tour for the film.

"Yesterday during the press junket, I pulled out my jockstrap," he says matter-of-factly. "Because I wear jock straps. I don't wear boxers," he explains.

Ugly Betty bids TV screens adios

During its four-year run, ABC's Ugly Betty skewered the New York fashion world, nabbing celebrity cameos from the likes of Lindsay Lohan, Shakira and Isaac Mizrahi.

It turned America Ferrera, who played the plucky but style-challenged Betty Suarez, into a household name. And it landed a prestigious Peabody Award.

As the credits roll on the wacky dramedy's last episode April 14, Latino, gay rights groups and fans are lamenting more than the loss of Betty's cringe-inducing outfits and the melodrama of the Meade family — owners of the show's fictional fashion magazine Mode. The hour-long show was also among the rare network programs to tackle such controversial issues as gay teens, body image and illegal immigration.

The show contrasted Betty's career at Mode with her working class, Mexican immigrant family, including her widower father Ignacio, her impulsive older sister Hilma and her theatre-loving, fashion expert nephew Justin, who came out as gay in this last season.

"Having this family at the centre of the show made it normal to watch a Latino family in a non-stereotypical way," Ferrera said in an email to The Associated Press.

Lisa Navarrete, a vice-president for the National Council of La Raza, said the show's absence will leave a void.

"You don't have a lot of Latino-themed shows on TV, so when we lose 'Ugly Betty,' we will have a major loss," she said.

The brainchild of producer Silvio Horta and actress and producer Salma Hayek, Ugly Betty was based on a Colombian telenovela that became so popular it was copied in Mexico, Germany and elsewhere.

The English version also proved a global hit. More than 10,000 Facebook fans

Ferrera stays busy

Ugly Betty will soon be over for its star, America Ferrera but she's got a new project in the works from behind the scenes. Ferrera will serve as executive producer of Pedro & Maria, a multicultural, interactive telenovela in development for MTV television and various web platforms. Pedro & Maria is billed as a bilingual, modern-day version of Romeo & Juliet that will give its audience the ability to vote on the direction the characters and story lines take.

from as far as England, the Philippines and Bangladesh have begged ABC not to cancel the show since it announced this season would be its last, following a decline in the show's ratings an ever-changing schedule.

Shortly after the height of the immigration debate, the show followed Betty's father as he confessed to his American-born children that he had been living in the U.S. illegally.

Even with comedic turns, "the plot line illustrated the complexity of the lives of many undocumented immigrants who are otherwise integrated into American life," Navarrete said. "You have a lot of families like Ugly Betty where you have U.S. born children whose parents have undocumented status."

More groundbreaking was the show's handling of its gay and transgender characters, said Jarrett Barrios, president of the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation.

Although initially played for laughs, Ugly Betty provided a sympathetic portrait of Meade's Alex who transforms into the stunning Alexis. And it followed the bumpy love life of Mode's gay fashion assistant Marc St. James.

A drug tale for Douglas heir

It was the summer of 2009 and Cameron Douglas was strung out on heroin — again.

Holed up in a trendy Manhattan hotel, the wayward heir to Hollywood royalty — son of Michael, grandson of Kirk — was shooting up sometimes six times a day.

His own stabs at stardom had mostly gone nowhere. But notoriety found him when federal agents showed up at his hotel door to cast him in an unwanted role: methamphetamine trafficker.

The 31-year-old's real-life drug drama in a Manhattan court has since laid bare the details of his downward spiral — which friends blame on a toxic mix of privilege, neglect and a family legacy of substance abuse — and his loved ones' deep despair over it.

"I must admit that my immediate reaction when I learned of my son's crime was one of guilt," his mother Diandra wrote in one of several letters from supporters asking a federal judge for leniency at a sentencing scheduled for today.

Even while using drugs, Cameron Douglas had a successful spin as a DJ in New York City.

"I hate to say it, but he needs to be rebuilt."

Robert B. Millman
a psychiatrist who has treated Cameron Douglas

The Drug Enforcement Administration declines to discuss the investigation. But court proceedings, including Douglas' guilty plea, and documents indicate he has given information in hopes of being spared a minimum sentence of 10 years in prison.

Douglas grew up "in the shadow of mythic forebear," wrote Nancy Hersch Ingram, Diandra's godmother. "He was a very sweet and shy boy ... That he somehow needed to be 'somebody' was evident, but who should he be?"

Douglas' lawyers have argued that he deserves three and a half years in prison at most, and he, too, is looking forward to redeeming himself and leading a sober life once he's out.

But a psychiatrist who has treated Douglas, Robert B. Millman, testified that his road to recovery will be rocky.

"I hate to say it, but he needs to be rebuilt," he said.

The single mom blues

SUCK IT UP, WOMAN! IT'S NOT LIKE YOU'RE WORKING THE CHECKOUT LINE AND LIVING OFF FOOD COUPONS. Responding to her ex-husband's accusations that she's an absentee parent, Kate Gosselin says she has no choice but to work, which takes her away from her eight kids — but that she tries to make every moment with them count that much more, people.com reports.

"I've got to work harder now than ever because I am a single mom," the former Jon & Kate Plus 8 star, 35, said Tuesday on NBC's Today show.

"In my heart I'm always in my kitchen, baking and cooking for my kids, and I'll always be there. It's a struggle to be here (in New York), to be anywhere. The emotion that you see is because I would rather be at home with them."

But that's not always possible, she says.

"I have to work. I have to provide for them. And it's a struggle that every working mom, especially single moms, go through, and I'm really feeling it now, and it's really hard."

The best she can do, Gosselin says, is carve out as much time with them as possible. She says she leaves Los Angeles, where Dancing with the Stars is filmed, every week to spend time in Pennsylvania.

"If I had 24 hours a day seven days a week with eight kids, it wouldn't be enough time in my book," she says.

"So, to minus out the working days is really hard. But I make the most of every minute I have with them ... when I'm home, we make those little spots of time really big in our memories."

Jon and Kate Gosselin are due in court in Pennsylvania on May 25 for a hearing on his motion for full custody of their eight children, the Associated Press reports.

Jon Gosselin's new lawyer also says his client does not earn enough to warrant the current $21,700 monthly child support award.

All the things money can buy

TOO BAD CLASS ISN'T ONE OF THEM. Steven Seagal's assistant is suing the former action star for sexual harassment, illegal trafficking of females for sex, failure to prevent sexual harassment, retaliation, wrongful termination and false representation.

about employment, according to court papers obtained by Radar Online.

Kayden Nguyen claims Mr. Seagal treated her as his personal sex toy while in Louisiana working on his reality series, Steven Seagal: Lawman, in which he works for a local sheriff's office.

"Mr. Seagal has been keeping two young female Russian 'attendants' on staff who were available for his sexual needs 24 hours a day, seven days a week," the suit also alleges.

Stop hurting his feelings

STICKS AND STONES WON'T BREAK HIS BONES BUT WORDS WILL. THAT'S HOW IT GOES, RIGHT? Ryan Phillippe

has had enough of people criticizing him over his divorce from Reese Witherspoon and his recent split with Cornish.

"I've been dumped on in the press for relationship stuff since Reese and I divorced," he tells Howard Stern.

"I don't feel like I deserve it. Things happen! How many people have you broken up with over your life?"

And after his relationship with Cornish, Phillippe says he's making some changes: "I have a new rule: not to date anyone who has a publicist," he says.

"Who announces a breakup? I don't understand that! There's no need for that."

Lightening lit up her love

AVRIL WHO? It looks like

Avril Lavigne and Brody Jenner are betting their rumored romance will last, as the pair reportedly got matching lightning bolt tattoos together while in Las Vegas, according to Gatecrasher.

"They showed up to the opening of Mario Barth King Ink and requested the same tats," a source says.

"They were really excited about it. They held hands openly and were kissing in a corner. Brody didn't leave Avril's side all night."

Jenner also recently introduced Lavigne to his mom, sources say, and Lavigne's ex-husband, Deryck Whibley, reportedly proves of the pairing.

Can we start calling him Henry VIII?

JUST NEVER GIVE THE MAN AN AXE A fifth woman has come forward claiming a sexual relationship with Jesse James during his marriage to Sandra Bullock, according to Radar Online.

The woman, Merilee Gerth, is a former employee of James' West Coast Choppers — a position that reportedly led to a big payoff when their tryst soured.

"When Merilee ended her relationship with Jesse in mid-2007, he fired her, so she hired Gloria Allred and sued him claiming sexual harassment," a source says.

"Merilee had irrefutable evidence of her affair with Jesse, so they ended up settling out of court."

Baby-making ultimatum?

GET A BABY INSIDE OF ME OR GET OUT! Renée Zellweger is reportedly drawing a line in the sand with Bradley Cooper, telling the Hangover star that if he doesn't want to have a baby, they're through. "Renée knows her biological clock is ticking and she's desperate to settle down and have a family," a source says, according to Hollyscoop.

"She has told Bradley in no uncertain terms that if he doesn't agree to raise a child with her, she sees no future for them as a couple. "Renée is even prepared to adopt if she isn't able to get pregnant."

Metro Recipe of the Day

French Onion Soup

INGREDIENTS:

- 6 cups thinly sliced onions
- 1 tbsp sugar
- 1/2 tsp pepper
- 1/3 cup vegetable oil
- 6 cups beef broth
- 8 slices French bread, toasted
- 1/2 cup shredded Parmesan or Swiss cheese

METHOD:

1. In Dutch oven, cook onions, sugar and pepper in oil over medium-low heat 20 minutes or until onions are caramelized, stirring frequently. Add broth; bring to boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 30 minutes.

2. Ladle soup into ovenproof bowls. Top each with slice of French bread; sprinkle with cheese. Broil 4-6 in. from heat until cheese is melted. Serve immediately.

ARIES MARCH 21-APRIL 20

Make the most of the next 24 hours. With the new moon working in your favor anything you start is sure to be a success.

LIBRA SEPT 23-OCT 23

Cosmic activity in your opposite sign means that the best way to impress other people is to be nice to them. Is that so hard?

TAURUS APRIL 21-MAY 21

You like to know what makes people tick, but the important question now is what motivates you. Think about it — then make it happen.

SCORPIO OCT 24-NOV 22

Scorpio is an ambitious sign and you are certainly not afraid of hard work, so roll up your sleeves and get started on a plan or project.

GEMINI MAY 22-JUNE 21

Make an effort to listen to people today, even people who bore or annoy you. You may find that you have more in common than you think.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 23-DEC 21

More than anything else it is your mind that creates your reality. Positive thoughts and feelings will inevitably lead to positive results.

CANCER JUNE 22-JULY 22

A new moon at the midheaven angle of your chart means you want to be pushed, you want to show what you can do.

CAPRICORN DEC 22-JAN 20

Don't try to make excuses or shift the blame. Be honest, both with yourself and with other people. It's okay to make mistakes

LEO JULY 23-AUG 23

You are in no mood to compromise and that's good because the planets say there is no reason why you should. Go your own way, do your own thing.

AQUARIUS JAN 21-FEB 18

Today's new moon falls in one of the most open and outgoing areas of your chart, so you'll want to go out and have a good time over the next 24 hours.

VIRGO AUG 24-SEPT 22

What you see today won't necessarily be what you get. In fact, you should be on your guard as tricksters of one kind or another are on the prowl.

PISCES FEB 19-MARCH 20

The urge to spend your way out of your troubles is likely to be overwhelming, but you must resist. Luxuries are not the answer.

This day in history

- 1828: Noah Webster copyrights the first edition of his dictionary.
- 1865: U.S. President Abraham Lincoln is shot in Ford's Theatre by John Wilkes Booth.
- 1894: Thomas Edison demonstrates the kinetoscope, a device for peep-show viewing using photographs that flip in sequence, a precursor to movies.
